

Reactions to One in Eight: Janice's Journey

"One in Eight: Janice's Journey" charts a valiant woman's struggles with breast cancer and with the stubborn, often wrong-headed American health industry. Told cinema verite fashion, "One in Eight" is a spry, surprisingly dramatic, true-life American thriller, and with an ecological agenda. Why is it that one in twenty American women used to get breast cancer in a lifetime, and now it's one in eight?

- Gerald Peary, Boston Phoenix film critic

With hilarity and intelligence, Janice takes us on the journey of her fight with breast cancer. As she navigates the medical establishment and finds support and challenges in this battle, we learn from her discoveries and appreciate her authenticity and humor. Entertaining, real, funny, illuminating, important, touching and smart.

- Women in the Director's Chair International Film and Video Festival, 2004

"One in Eight: Janice's Journey" is an extraordinary film depicting one young woman's experience with breast cancer. It is especially helpful as it explores both the personal and the larger societal issues around this epidemic disease. Anyone who cares about someone living with breast cancer will find this a moving and provocative film.

- Hester Hill Schnipper, LICSW
Chief, Oncology Social Work

Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center, Boston
Author of *After Breast Cancer: A Commonsense Guide to Life
After Treatment*

One in Eight: Janice's Journey was produced and directed by Cynthia McKeown and is distributed by Fanlight Productions, a leading distributor of film and video programs on healthcare, mental health, aging and disabilities. To order copies on video please contact Sandy at Fanlight Productions at 617-469-4999 or email Sandy@Fanlight.com or visit their web site at www.fanlight.com.